These extended military raids stemmed from changes that had taken place outside Europe before the time of the Crusades, most notably the growth and expansion of Islam. In contrast to Europe, iodine-induced transient hypothyroidism has not been documented frequently in North America. Even maternal PTU doses of mg or less have been associated with an effect on neonatal thyroid function, illustrating the increased fetal sensitivity to these drugs. Babies with PTU- or MMI-induced hypothyroidism characteristically develop an enlarged thyroid gland and if the dose is sufficiently large, respiratory embarrassment may occur.
